

CODE OF BUSINESS CONDUCT AND ETHICS

(Approved by the Board of Directors on November 5, 2019)

I. INTRODUCTION

Josemaria Resources Inc and its direct and indirect subsidiaries (collectively the “Corporation”), is committed to conducting its business in compliance with applicable laws and with the highest ethical standards. Acting with integrity, honesty and in good faith with respect to what is in the best interests of the Corporation’s stakeholders is fundamental to the Company’s reputation and ongoing success. The Corporation is committed to sustainable growth within the parameters of ensuring the safety and well-being of its employees, protecting the environment, and supporting the communities in which it operates. The directors, officers and employees of the Corporation must be committed to upholding these responsibilities in all facets of the Company’s day to day operations.

In addition, the directors, officers and employees of the Corporation and persons or companies related to or controlled by them are expected to act in accordance with applicable laws and with the highest standards of ethical and professional behavior. It is essential that the Corporation’s directors, officers and employees read and be familiar with, respect, and adhere to the Company’s Code of Business Conduct and Ethics and to the rules and procedures outlined in the Company’s other corporate policies, including the Corporate Disclosure Policy, Whistleblower Policy, and Anti-Bribery and Anti-Corruption Policy. This Code of Business Conduct and Ethics (the “Code”) summarizes key guiding principles of conduct and ethics and the standards that must guide the actions of the Corporation’s directors, officers (including, without limitation, our Chief Executive Officer and Chief Financial Officer), employees and consultants. All references to “Employees” in this Code include all employees, directors, officers and consultants of the Corporation.

The Corporation expects all Employees to comply and act in accordance with this Code. The Corporation shall require that its agents, contractors, consultants and suppliers comply with this Code in its relations with the Corporation as a condition of doing business with the Corporation.

This Code sets out written standards that are designed to deter wrongdoing and to promote:

- Honest and ethical conduct, including the ethical handling of actual or apparent conflicts of interest between personal and professional relationships;
- The avoidance of conflicts of interest, including disclosure to an appropriate person of any material transaction or relationship that reasonably could be expected to give rise to such a conflict;
- Full, fair, accurate, timely and understandable disclosure in reports and documents that the Corporation files with, or submits to, the securities regulators and in other public communications made by the Corporation;
- The fostering of a safe, secure and healthy workplace for all of the Corporation’s Employees;
- Compliance with applicable governmental laws, rules and regulations;
- The prompt internal reporting to an appropriate person or persons of violations of this Code;
- Accountability for adherence to this Code.

While covering a wide range of practices and procedures, this Code cannot and does not cover every issue that may arise, or every situation in which ethical decisions must be made, but rather sets forth key guiding principles of business conduct that the Corporation expects of its Employees. This Code should be read in conjunction with the Corporation’s other corporate policies and procedures, including those related to corporate disclosure, insider trading, and the protection of confidential information.

II. COMPLIANCE WITH LAWS, RULES AND REGULATIONS

The Corporation is strongly committed to conducting its business affairs with honesty and integrity and in full compliance with all laws, rules and regulations applicable to the Company’s business in the countries in which it operates. Each Employee must at all times respect and obey such laws, rules and regulations, including insider trading laws, and should avoid any situation that could be perceived as improper, unethical or indicate a casual attitude towards compliance with such laws, rules and regulations. Although not all Employees are expected to know the details of all of these laws, it is important to know enough to determine when to seek advice from appropriate personnel. The Corporation provides all necessary information to its Employees to promote compliance with laws, rules and regulations, including insider-trading laws and laws prohibiting bribery and corruption.

III. INSIDER TRADING AND HEDGING

Employees who have access to the Corporation's confidential information are not permitted to use or share that information for stock trading purposes. All non-public information about the Corporation should be considered confidential information. The use non-public information for personal financial benefit or to "tip" others who might make an investment decision on the basis of this information is not only unethical but also illegal. If you have any questions, please consult the Corporate Secretary or Chair of the Corporation's Audit Committee.

Employees are not permitted to purchase financial instruments, including for greater certainty, prepaid variable forward contracts, equity swaps, collars, puts, calls or other derivative securities that are designed to hedge or offset a decrease or an increase in market value of the Corporation's shares, held, directly or indirectly, by such Employee.

IV. CONFLICTS OF INTEREST

All Employees have an obligation to act in the best interest of the Corporation. Any situation that presents an actual or potential conflict between an Employee's personal interests and the interests of the Corporation should be reported to the Chair of the Corporation's Audit Committee. Any Employee has a conflict of interest when his or her personal interests, relationships or activities, or those of a member of his or her immediate family, interfere or conflict, or even appear to interfere or conflict, with the Corporation's interests.

A "conflict of interest" can arise when an individual's private interest interferes in any way – or even appears to interfere – with the interests of the Corporation as a whole. A conflict situation can arise when an Employee takes actions or has an interest that may make it difficult to perform his or her work objectively and effectively. Conflicts of interest can also arise when an Employee, or a member of his or her immediate family, receives improper personal benefits as a result of his or her position at the Corporation. Employees shall perform the responsibilities of their positions on the basis of what is in the best interests of the Corporation and free from the influence of personal considerations and relationships. By way of example, a conflict of interest may arise if any Employee:

- Has a personal interest in a transaction or agreement involving the Corporation;
- Accepts a gift, service, payment or other benefit (other than a nominal gift) from a competitor, supplier, or customer of the Corporation, or any entity or organization with which the Corporation does business or seeks or expects to do business;
- Lends to, borrows from, or has a material interest in a competitor, supplier, or customer of the Corporation, or any entity or organization with which the Corporation does business or seeks or expects to do business (other than routine investments in publicly traded companies);
- Knowingly competes with the Corporation or diverts a business opportunity from the Corporation;
- Serves as an officer, director, employee, consultant, or in any management capacity, in an entity or organization with which the Corporation does business or seeks or expects to do business (other than routine business involving immaterial amounts, in which the Employee has no decision-making or other role);
- Knowingly acquires, or seeks to acquire an interest in property (such as exploration and mining concessions, real estate, patent rights, securities, or other properties) where the Corporation has or might have, an interest; or
- Participates in a venture in which the Corporation has expressed an interest.

Employees are expected to use common sense and good judgment in deciding whether a potential conflict of interest may exist.

V. CONFIDENTIALITY OF CORPORATE INFORMATION

Employees must maintain the confidentiality of information entrusted to them by the Corporation or its partners and associates or affiliates, except when disclosure is authorized or legally mandated. Confidential information includes all non-public information that might be of use to competitors or might be harmful to the Corporation or its partners and associates or affiliates, if disclosed.

Where applicable, the Employee should also perform a cost benefit analysis.

Directors, officers and employees of the Corporation and its subsidiaries are expected to be familiar with and to adhere to the Corporation's other corporate policies and procedures which supplement this Code of Business Conduct and Ethics.

Proprietary information includes intellectual property such as business, marketing and corporate development information, plans, engineering and all technical information, databases, records, salary information and any unpublished financial or technical data and reports. Unauthorized use or distribution of this information would violate this Code. It could also be illegal and result in civil or even criminal penalties.

The term "business records" covers a broad range of files, reports, business plans, receipts, policies and communications, including hard copy, electronic, audio recording, microfiche and microfilm files whether maintained at work or at home. The Corporation prohibits the unauthorized destruction of or tampering with any records, whether written or in electronic form, where the Corporation is required by law or government regulation to maintain such records or where it has reason to know of a threatened or pending government investigation or litigation relating to such records.
